George is the solutions developer and lead creative consultant for Grendelfly Studio, a division of Saltmarsh, Cleaveland & Gund's Information Technology Services practice, which concentrates on providing web design, application development, internet marketing and shared hosting services for many of the firm's clients. He offers our clients an accessible web presence as well as applications such as blogs, e-commerce portals and interactive presentations to help connect with users and manage their in-house needs. With over 30 years of experience, George has developed a strong talent for client problem-solving and process streamlining through online solutions. Formerly, George was a shareholder and creative director of web design company where he became familiar with both ASP programming and Flash application design.
